Areas of Expertise

- Social and productive engagement in later life
- Psychological resilience and health/wellbeing in later life

Leadership Experience

1. Research Team Leadership

Assembled multi-disciplinary scientific teams to pursue joint professional projects

- Co-Leading a team with colleagues at the University of Michigan that is developing and releasing a dataset linking detailed occupational data with the Health and Retirement Study, including obtaining funding from the Social Security Administration, to increase scientific research on how the characteristics of jobs shape the lives of older workers before and after retirement.
- Developed and submitted four large foundation grants involving strategically selected research teams with expertise related to: a) inequalities in older workers (US lead in an international team), b) nurse aids in long-term care facilities (US lead in an international team), c) evaluation of a community based social integration program in Florida (serving as PI), and d) psycho-social benefits of pet ownership in association with major social losses (2018-2021)
- Organized and managed research teams in the submission of one institutional, and three major National Institute of Health grants focusing on: a) cognitive function and volunteering in later life, b) physical and cognitive function and psychological resilience (resubmission November, 2021), and c) psychological resilience, educational disparities, and cognitive function
- Developed, managed and trained a research team of 13 in a funded research study evaluating racial differences in the effects of family caregiving on cognitive, functional, and psychological health, serving as PI (2018-2019)
- Developed research teams focused on evaluating cognitive and physical health outcomes related to retirement and volunteering in later life, including publication of 13 manuscripts and two book chapters (2012-2021)
- Organized and developed a multi-disciplinary research team focused on state and federal Silver Alert policies, including initiation and publication of four manuscripts, and development and submission of two large NIH grants (2009-2012)

2. Operational Leadership

Played lead operational roles in relevant agency/community projects.

- Primary consultant for survey research team, Distinguished Career Institute, Stanford University, 2014-2018
- Principal scientific consultant and developer for start-up business “Vitality Index,” 2014-2018
- Lead analyst and manager of research and methodology team, “State of Longevity Report” project, Stanford Center on Longevity, 2015-2016
- Project lead for “Hidden in Plain Sight: How Intergenerational Relationships Can Transform Our Future,” Stanford Center on Longevity, 2014-2016

- Project manager, Nursing Home Re-immersion intervention project, Scripps Gerontology Center, 2009-2010

3. Organizational Leadership

Held leadership roles in professional, civic and institutional organizations.

Other Consultancy

- 2016 Expert consultant for A Future Forum: "Envisioning The Future of Senior Health and Independence." Forum was sponsored by SCAN, Inc., and The Futures Company. Long Beach, CA.
Roles: Served as expert advisor in development of future planning and program development to be implemented by SCAN.
- 2015-2017 Member of the Senior Corps Technical Working Group (TWG) in support of the project "Senior Corps Longitudinal Evaluation" (Contract Number CNSHQ14F0111 GS-10F-0285K) funded by the Corporation for National and Community Service (CNCS) and administered by JBS International, Inc. (JBS). Washington, D. C. (appointed)
Roles: Consultation with development and implementation of a national longitudinal evaluation study of the efficacy and health effects of engagement in Senior Corps programs.
- 2009-2010 Member, Governor's Civic Engagement Council, Lifelong Learning Committee, State of Ohio (appointed)
Roles: Consultation related to identification of state policy recommendations to the governor's office, designed to enhance the civic engagement (i.e., paid work, volunteering, and lifelong learning) of older adults in the State of Ohio. My role focused on development of recommendations with the lifelong learning task force.

Applied Projects

- 2020 Taylor, M., Carr, D.C., & Ramirez-Surmeier, L. "Student Caregiver Conversations" Project. AARP.
Role: Co-PI for project using survey data collection and in-depth focus group interviews with higher education students and higher education administrators to identify key challenges and supports for college students who have family caregiving obligations.
- 2014-2016 Stanford Center on Longevity: "Hidden in Plain Sight: How Intergenerational Relationships Can Transform Our Future." This project was a project jointly funded by Encore.org and the David and Lucile Packard Foundation to bring together experts on exploring how experienced adults could play a critical role in the lives of youth in the US. A meeting of experts occurred in 2014 (see below). Served as primary author of monograph supporting initiative and based on meeting of experts (<http://longevity.stanford.edu/2016/06/01/hidden-in-plain->

- sight-how-intergenerational-relationships-can-transform-our-future/.
 Monograph introduced key ideas and suggested strategies for promoting intergenerational engagement in communities in the US.
- 2012-2016 Stanford Center on Longevity: “Santa Clara County Volunteerism Intervention Study.” This project was a long-term public health study on all Santa Clara County employees. The purpose of the project was to identify critical mechanisms to enhance volunteer engagement among older workers and recent retirees from the county system, determine the mechanisms that drive the health benefits associated with volunteering in later life, and develop a model for effective recruitment, retention, and deployment of volunteers that is replicable in other counties nationally. This project started in 2012 with a survey. Project funding for the intervention stage began in 2015, and the intervention launched following my departure from SCL in 2016.
 Roles: Research design and analysis, manuscript writing, and production and presentation of data output.
- 2015-2016 Stanford Center on Longevity: “State of Longevity Report.” An extensive national study on major indicators of mortality, morbidity, and well-being among the US Population. First report to be released in February, 2016, and featured in TIME magazine in February, 2016, with subsequent annual reports published thereafter.
 Roles: Manager of research and methodology, including management and hiring of research consultants, overseeing staff involved in data analysis and reporting, and production and presentation of data output
- 2014 Stanford Center on Longevity: “Pass It On: Mobilizing Encore Talent to Transform The Prospects of Vulnerable Children and Youth” was a meeting of experts, supported by the David and Lucile Packard Foundation and Encore.org to identify areas of research, policy, and practice to enhance the involvement of older adults in the well-being of vulnerable youth in the United States.
 Roles: Development of background materials, organization of event, key author in development of monograph outlining ways to develop a national movement that enhances involvement of older people in the lives of youth.
- 2012 Stanford Center on Longevity: “Homes for An Aging America: Priorities For Research and Federal Action” was a meeting of experts. Supported by the MacArthur Foundation, we brought together national leaders in the area of housing in the United States to discuss the challenges and potential solutions for housing among older adults in the US.
 Roles: Development of background research, analysis of nationally representative data describing housing related issues in the United States, presentation of demographic distribution of vulnerable populations of older adults, development of unpublished report.
- 2009-2010 Nursing Home Re-immersion intervention: Development, implementation, and analysis of intervention strategies for home and community-based programs designed to decrease nursing home use, Scripps Gerontology Center and the Ohio Department of Aging
 Roles: Project management for data collection and data management, led consensus building among state stakeholders
