

THE ATTORNEY GENERAL'S HONORS PROGRAM

Many distinguished attorneys began their careers through the Attorney General's Honors Program -- the largest and most prestigious federal entry-level attorney hiring program of its kind. ENRD is an enthusiastic participant in the Attorney General's Honors Program.

Eligibility for the Honors Program

Eligibility is generally limited to graduating law students and recent law school graduates who entered judicial clerkships, graduate law programs, or qualifying legal fellowships within 9 months of law school graduation and who meet additional eligibility requirements [see below].

Selection Criteria

The Department of Justice takes pride in the fact that we consider the "whole candidate" when making selections for employment. Selections are made based on many elements of a candidate's background including a demonstrated commitment to government service, academic achievement, leadership, law review or moot court experience, legal aid and clinical experience, past employment, and extracurricular activities that relate to the work of the Department and the relevant component.

Every year, the Department hires a significant number of entry-level attorneys through the Honors Program. Selectees represent diverse backgrounds and interests, and come from law schools throughout the country. The Honors Program is centrally managed by the Office of Attorney Recruitment and Management, but each participating component reviews the applications submitted and makes independent hiring decisions.

Candidates interested in starting their career as an entry-level attorney with the Department must apply through the Attorney General's Honors Program via an on-line application.
